RIOJA: THEN & NOW

We have made an attempt to leapfrog a rather dark period in the lifespan of Rioja. Once a wine on the lips and in the cellars of collectors around the world, the region fell prey, like so many others, to the gravitational pull of a few critics who championed heavily manipulated and manufactured wines. What was unique and special about the wines of Rioja disappeared in favor of a homogeneous formula. It's taken some time but things are bouncing back. Younger, more enlightened producers are asking questions, farming organically and pushing the envelope. And if you want to see how the greats of yesterday are holding up we have a handful of special aged bottles to enjoy.

SPOTLIGHT: WORDS FROM WINE ENTHUSIAST MAGAZINE

"This sommelier-owned Spanish spot has a tight, informative wine list that uses Northern Spain as a jumping-off point rather than a constraint. There are wines from Languedoc-Roussillon, selected for their proximity to Spain, and innovative young Rioja producers offered alongside traditional bottlings from the 1980s. The list has an "Islands and Volcanoes" section that's especially good with the dishes cooked over a wood fire."

ITALY'S GLIMMER TWINS

Italy is awash in great red wine. Every region seems to boast a half dozen VERY interesting examples. We suggest it is currently the greatest red wine producing country in the world. However, two grapes stand head and shoulders above the rest. Only two are true nobility: Sangiovese and Nebbiolo. They are responsible for some of the most famous wines in the world: Brunello, Chianti, Barolo, Barbaresco. Each of the above are textbook examples of type.

CALIFORNIA LOVE

California wine can be a troubling minefield. Often marketing has driven the bus and the wines have been formulaic and lacked a sense of "there-ness." The oak has been heavy, the alcohol heavier and the price tag heaviest. But time and again we are presented with graphic proof that this does NOT have to be the case. Witness here fine examples from heirloom producers like Mount Eden and Cain keeping company with a few of the state's younger stars. It would be hard to argue that these are not all compelling expressions of these classic grape varieties.

MAGIC COMES FROM REMOTE PLACES

Something unique and magical happens when grapes are grown on islands and/or volcanic soils. In the event that it is BOTH, the sky (or the sea) is the limit. Take the active volcano Mt. Etna on Sicily, or the Canary Islands as examples. Neither region may seem suitable for the production of world class grapes but alas! They display energy, complexity and harmony that are the brilliant sum of their very unique parts. These wines express something that just can't be found from more conventional settings.
